

Celebrating 115 Years

of Home, Health, and Happiness!

A Message from our CEO

In 2020, KenCrest celebrated 115 years as a human services provider organization.

It's amazing to reflect, recognize, and appreciate what has been accomplished since our early beginnings as a few dedicated individuals helping immigrants with tuberculosis in a Philadelphia neighborhood. It's just as amazing to think of what we've been able to accomplish in the last year during a pandemic, the likes of which we haven't seen since the Great Influenza epidemic of 1918-1920.

In the past year, KenCrest staff ensured that the people we support enjoyed as much normalcy as possible, even when activities in the community or seeing friends and family were limited. Staff created new activities for residents in our homes to engage with one another, oftentimes through daily virtual “meetings.” We continued to turn over the keys to apartments for people who wanted a place of their own through our Supported Independent Living program. And our Lifesharing families went above and beyond to keep the people in their care on their daily routines to minimize the impact of the pandemic. For many at KenCrest, “home” meant so much more.

Following in the footsteps of our founders, whose first mission was the health of a community, many KenCrest staff who work directly with our clients stepped up to learn new safety protocols to keep residents, early learners, and other colleagues safe. Some of our staff began offering services remotely through smartphones, tablets, and computers so even the youngest people we support could continue improving and learning from a distance. When vaccines became available, our leadership opened up some of our facilities to offer the shots to any employee or person receiving services who wanted them. Throughout this past year, health and wellness have been at the forefront of every aspect of our work.

While there were plenty of difficulties and sorrows in the past year, we tried to bring some moments of happiness to those we support. Annual trips to the shore were replaced with virtual vacations with the help of new enabling technology to “visit” a new land or experience the front row of a rock concert for the first time. Staff acknowledged residents’ birthdays with drive-by celebrations, balloons, singing “happy birthday” from their cars, and gifts. And when it was safe, children who wanted to return to their Early Learning Centers were happy to be with their mask-wearing friends again.

It’s been quite a historic year for us in so many ways, and through it all, we’ve kept our focus on home, health, and happiness for all whom we support.

Here’s to the next 115 years!

Marian Baldini
KenCrest President & CEO

KenCrest was founded in 1905 by Lutheran Deaconess Sister Maria Roeck and a local physician Dr. William G. Eisenhardt to provide care to people suffering from tuberculosis in the Kensington neighborhood of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Several years later in 1913, a property called RiverCrest was purchased outside of the city to provide a location where children who were orphaned by tuberculosis or afflicted with other ailments could “have a place in the sun” and heal in the fresh air. In 1947, when tuberculosis was eradicated, the organization, now under the leadership of Sister Grace Jones, sought to meet a need in the community — supporting children with disabilities and their families. Combining the “Ken” from Kensington and the “Crest” from RiverCrest, KenCrest, as we know it today, was formed and adapted to our new mission.

115 Years!

A Brief KenCrest History

To this day, KenCrest remains focused on our proven model of serving people in their own communities with dignity and respect, supporting not only the person but the whole family. In the early 1980s and '90s, under the direction of William J. Nolan, KenCrest achieved many “firsts,” including the first Early Learning Centers in Philadelphia that welcomed very young children with disabilities alongside typically developing children; community living homes in Pennsylvania and Delaware; customized and supported employment services for people with developmental disabilities; and the first homes in the country that specialized in supporting children who are dependent on medical technology.

In the early 2000s, KenCrest continued to expand our footprint, serving more and more people each year in Pennsylvania, Delaware, and now Connecticut. In 2015, KenCrest welcomed Marian Baldini as our President and CEO, and we continue to expand community options, early education, employment, support services, and transition services as we move towards our goal of authentic inclusion for everyone.

In 2020, KenCrest celebrated our 115th anniversary as a human services organization whose focus remains on creating meaningful lives for the communities we serve.

We've come a long way since 1905 and the singular focus of treating those with tuberculosis in the Kensington neighborhood of Philadelphia. Over the course of 115 years, KenCrest has expanded our locations to include Connecticut, Delaware, and Southeastern Pennsylvania. While each state offers slightly different services to people with intellectual and developmental disabilities, all of them provide residential living options. But at KenCrest, our residences are more than a place to live...they are a place to truly call "home."

Home at KenCrest

Whether a person lives in a home with others or if they live on their own through the Supported Independent Living program, KenCrest staff strives to ensure that every resident enjoys the space in which they live. One such person, featured on the next page, is Mike, who takes delight in the beauty of his own backyard. Two roommates, Darryl and Fred, are also part of Supported Independent Living. They chose to relax in the safety of their home during the pandemic. These gentlemen enjoy the freedom that living in their own place gives them, while receiving the support services they might need from KenCrest.

For those with complex medical needs, KenCrest's Community Medical Homes employ expertly trained medical staff and maintain superb technology to aid in the residents' care. Each of these homes are staffed with caring, qualified nurses and support professionals who not only attend to the residents' needs 24 hours a day, but also create cozy and inviting living spaces. This spring, after 17 years of living in a Transitional Care Home for Children, Tracy left her KenCrest residence to move to her biological family's home. During her time with KenCrest, the staff who cared for Tracy took her on many trips, including one to Disney World via the Make-a-Wish Foundation, celebrated her birthdays, prom and high school graduation, and even taught her how to sew masks when the pandemic hit. Tracy, who has depended on specialized care for her entire life, overcame many obstacles in her long journey, and KenCrest persevered and advocated until Tracy was able to move on to her next home — with her family.

Since 1985, Lifesharing provider families have opened up their own homes and invited someone with disabilities to share their lives in a supportive family environment. People with disabilities share more than meals and vacations with their provider family...they share their hopes and dreams for the future. They also learn to trust and care for one another. During this past year, family providers went the extra mile in many ways to ensure the health and safety of their lifesharing partners, like Rhonda Moore with the gentleman who shares her home, Tom. Rhonda had the barbershop call her when no one was there so that Tom could keep up with his routine trim, which is important to him, and he would not be exposed to others while getting his hair cut. This was a small thing for Rhonda, but it meant the world to Tom.

Despite the COVID-19 challenges during the past year, we made keeping everyone safe and feeling loved in their home a priority. After all, there's no place like home.

The health of those we support as well as our staff was at the forefront of every discussion and decision as we began our 115th year as an organization — just as it was in 1905. With the coronavirus rapidly spreading, the leadership at KenCrest acted quickly and met several times a week to discuss what needed to happen in each program, how new safety protocols were working, and how to offer our clients and staff vaccines when the opportunities arose.

To keep the residents in our homes as safe as possible, staff were trained on new safety protocols regarding hand washing, wearing masks properly, new cleaning procedures, and limiting visits with people who did not live or work in the homes. Direct support staff stepped up in every way to keep the residents in their care, as well as themselves, protected from exposure to the virus. Thanks to many generous donors, KenCrest received masks, cleaning supplies, and personal protective equipment to keep residents and staff safe.

Our Early Learning Centers had to move to virtual learning for much of the year to ensure that students and teachers could safely learn while not being face-to-face in a classroom. We also offered weekly virtual trainings for parents called SmartConnections, which gave parents

Thomas Carlyle

“I was so excited to be asked to work at one of KenCrest’s vaccine clinics ...I was willing to do whatever I could to help our staff and our clients, and working the clinic was a great experience. It was fantastic to see so many people take this step to protect their health and the health of those around them.”

strategies for mental health check-ins with themselves and their children. These sessions, conducted by Ms. Marilyn, the Family Service Worker at the Kensington Early Learning Center, offered valuable tips for parents in handling their children’s behaviors and emotions during the pandemic. Many families raved about how helpful her suggestions were and how they changed the family dynamics for the better during this challenging time.

When we made the decision to suspend activities at our Pennsylvania Community Participation programs, we had no idea that in a few months we’d be using those centers as sites for Rite Aid to come in and administer COVID-19 vaccinations to residents, staff members, and other human service provider agencies in the region. KenCrest leadership worked closely with the Office of Developmental Programs and the Philadelphia Department of Public Health to make the vaccines available to all staff and residents who wished to receive it. More than 850 people received vaccinations at KenCrest hosted clinics in Pennsylvania in the spring of 2021. We also found vaccination sites for our employees and clients in Delaware and Connecticut through their government health services, and teamed up with Walgreen’s to do several mobile vaccination clinics for homebound people.

No matter what service people received this past year, KenCrest made every effort possible to maintain their health and safety.

▲ Ms. Marilyn led virtual SmartConnections sessions for family members to mitigate any challenging behaviors and emotions from their children during the pandemic.

The pandemic forced the cancellation of many daily activities this past year. However, KenCrest found ways to bring happiness to those we support to keep spirits up and put smiles on faces.

Happiness at KenCrest

Several people supported in our Employment program had to learn new safety protocols as well as a few new responsibilities, especially those working in grocery stores like ACME and Giant. Despite the changes that the pandemic brought to their jobs, all of them had one thing in common: they were happy to be working, especially when so many were not as fortunate. Billy, a store associate at Walmart since September 2020, was thrilled to be working, earning a paycheck, and socializing with his peers.

When milestone birthdays, like Wayne's 50th, came around for our residents, KenCrest staff formed drive-by caravans with balloons and signs hanging from their cars and honked horns. Drivers sang "Happy Birthday" or shouted well wishes to the honorees who sat at the end of driveways. Staff made sure that each person in our care who celebrated a milestone birthday received some extra-special love this year. We also made "happiness deliveries" to those who needed a little pick-me-up with balloons, flowers, or a basket of treats.

▼ When Wayne celebrated his 50th birthday, KenCrest staff formed a caravan to drive by his residence, sing, honk, and wish him well.

▲ Even through their masks, these children at the Northeast Early Learning Center were all smiles to be back in the classroom with their friends.

Because those we support could not go out into the community as they had before the pandemic, KenCrest invented new ways for them to enjoy their days. Through a private website, staff created new weekly activities including bingo, drawing classes, dance parties, cooking lessons, chair yoga, and sing-a-longs, to name a few. Our Enabling Technology department purchased four sets of virtual reality goggles that allow people to take “virtual vacations” from the comfort of their homes. They also delivered convertible laptops (which are both a laptop and a tablet in one device) to many of our homes so that more residents could connect with others online when in-person visits were not possible. Family members were able to visit their loved one at a hugging booth that KenCrest built in one of our Pennsylvania Community Participation locations. Families, like KenCrest resident Drew and his parents, could safely give hugs through a plexiglass wall with hugging sleeves built into it, bringing smiles and happy tears to many faces.

After several months of not having in-person education, our Early Learning Centers opened up again in January 2021, allowing children to come back to the classrooms if they desired. The little learners were thrilled to be able to see their friends and teachers again. Even through the masks, their smiles lit up the rooms that had been empty for many months.

Although we faced countless limitations this past year, KenCrest continued to deliver the happiness that our clients deserve.

Advocacy at KenCrest

Not even a pandemic could slow down KenCrest's crucial advocacy efforts on behalf of children, families, and people with disabilities. Despite the challenging environment, the advocacy department supported our constituency with their usual zeal — testifying before legislators; hosting virtual program tours; attending advocacy events; and meeting with elected officials in Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Connecticut.

This year, the agency's advocacy efforts focused on COVID-19 relief funding and raising awareness for the nonprofit provider community. KenCrest advocated passionately and successfully for policies and funding that support community inclusion and high-quality early learning and child care. To position our priorities and messaging, KenCrest worked closely with advocacy partners and membership associations to communicate the pandemic's impact with Congressional and statewide leaders.

KenCrest's Executive Directors testified before multiple bodies of government, including Philadelphia City Council, the Delaware General Assembly, and the Connecticut General Assembly. These leaders advocated for policies that promote accessibility and inclusion, and for family-sustaining wages for direct support professionals (DSPs). Additionally, KenCrest hosted virtual tours of the South and West Early Learning Centers so that legislators could see how the programs safely adapted and hear directly from child care staff on their experiences working through the pandemic.

advocacy efforts, whether through registering to vote or contacting legislators, we remain committed to using our voice and influence to make the world a better — and more inclusive — place for all.

2020 KenCrest Masters

On November 5, 2020, KenCrest marked our 115th anniversary with a special KenCrest Masters through a variety of virtual videos honoring our history of home, health, and happiness.

In a year of so much uncertainty, the support of this year's KenCrest Masters ensured that 2020 was a success for all of the KenCrest Family. We are beyond grateful to see how our community rallied to support those who depend on KenCrest so that they can continue to live inclusive, meaningful lives. This year's event raised $161,623 to explore possibilities, mobilize resources, and empower dreams.

Thanks to all of our amazing sponsors, and a special thanks to NFP, Marie Becker, and Angela and Colin Dougherty for their peerless leadership as part of our event committee. We had a blast showing off all that's going on in KenCrest's programs through our videos, which can still be seen on our YouTube channel under the "KenCrest Masters 2020" playlist.

2021 Community Champions: Past and Present

For six years running, KenCrest has honored supporters in our communities who go above and beyond to help us achieve our mission. In spite of the challenges of the past year, we continued to celebrate our 2021 Community Champions in a safe, virtual way from April 12-23 over social media and on our website. In keeping with our 115th anniversary celebration, we honored five past Community Champions recipients as well as five present awardees who helped KenCrest during the pandemic in a variety of ways. We also introduced a new award this year: the KenCrest Lifesharing Provider of the Year Award.

We are extremely grateful to every Community Champion, as well as every Honorable Mention, who helped us continue to support the individuals in KenCrest's care. Special thanks also go out to our sponsors and donors of this virtual event.

In the early 20th century, KenCrest friend and board member William P.M. Braun established the RiverCrest "Garden of Sweet Memories," in which tributes and memorials were recorded for loved ones. Our KenCrest Golden Book continues this tradition: In an impressive leather-bound volume, we record the names of any individuals for which honorary or memorial gifts are given in calligraphy. The names of the following individuals have been added in the past year to the Golden Book.

At KenCrest, we offer a variety of ways for our donors to invest in our mission. Gifts designated for “where it’s needed most” will allow KenCrest to address our most critical needs. You are also welcome to restrict your gift for a specific program or need, such as improvements to a community living home, transportation needs, supplies for our Early Learning Centers, or employment opportunities.

Ways to Give

Checks

Please make checks payable to KenCrest.

Credit Cards

We accept credit cards over the phone or online at: www.kencrest.org/donate

United Way

You can designate KenCrest through Donor Choice #00839.

Matching Gifts

Check with your HR department to see if your company has a matching gift program. The doubling of your gift has a huge impact on those we serve.

Legacy Gifts

Many donors choose to fulfill their philanthropic wishes in coordination with their financial and estate plans. You may also choose to name KenCrest as a beneficiary of your will, trust, retirement plan, or insurance policy. You may also choose to establish a gift that pays an income to you, the donor, before ultimately benefitting KenCrest.

To learn more about giving opportunities, contact Jeff Dubnow, Chief Development Officer, at 610-825-9360, ext. 1023.
